Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn, center, told a news conference Friday that the policies followed in the handling of a prisoner who took his own life in the county jail on Wednesday were adequate. Others participating in the conference were Lt. Jim Hopkins, left, jail administrator, and County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter, right. The complete story is on Page B1.

Stallings takes recount fight to Congress

The Associated Press

BOISE — Republican Congressman George Hansen on Friday lost his quest for a general vote recount and filed notice he wants to contest through Congress the Nov. 6 election that saw him defeated.

The Idaho Supreme Court issued a two-page opinion upholding Attorney General Jim Jones' refusal to grant a full recount of votes cast in the 2nd Congressional District on Nov. 6.

Hansen said the Supreme Court's decision was based on "a narrow construction of the law."

"I think it's unfortunate that the court is upholding an error in the interpretation of a rich man's law that says you can't have a recount unless you want to spend tens of thousands of dollars to get one," he said from his Washington office.

Hansen had argued a partial recount he financed showed enough changes-in-vote tallies to justify a full recount, at state expense, of all 202,000 votes cast.

But Jones contended that to trigger a recount, Hansen would have to have shown vote changes that established a trend in his favor. The partial recount of 45 precincts Hansen selected pushed Democrat Richard Stallings' edge to 170 votes, up from an official 132.

The Supreme Court issued a two-page order that said the justices had reviewed the arguments in the case and concluded Jones' decision was proper. The court didn't explain its analysis of the case.

In Washington, Hansen and his attorney, Frank Campbell, beat a Friday afternoon deadline and filed a formal notice of contest with the House Administration Committee.

The policy, if accepted by the Administration Committee, would move Hansen's attempt to overturn Stallings' 170-vote victory to the federal level.

The key points in the notice are the recount — issue — itself, — along — with numerous voting irregularities that Hansen claims have come up throughout the district.

"Taken together, it is my contention that a reliable count of legal votes cast will show that I won the seat because a majority of legitimate voters voted for me," Hansen said.

If a contest is pursued, the Democrat-controlled House would have the final decision on whether to endorse the Stallings victory, said Stallings, in favor of Hansen or deny the seat to either man and effectively force a new election.

Utah coal mine shaft yields 4 more bodies

By JENNIFER BRANDLON
The Associated Press

ORANGEVILLE, Utah — Rescuers found the bodies of 13 miners Friday in a smoldering mine that had been burning for two days, and four more were found in a tunnel as hopes dimmed that 14 other miners still trapped inside would be found alive.

The miners, 26 men and one woman, were trapped inside the Wilberg Mine in central Utah when a blaze broke out Wednesday night.

"We still maintain some hope they (the other trapped miners) got to a safe place," said Robert Henrie, a spokesman for Emery Mining, which operates the mine. "But clearly, as we get deeper and as more bodies are found, our hopes are dimmed."

CURT CARTER
Worked at mine 5 years

Workers had not removed any of the 13 bodies because federal officials had ordered them not to because "of the limited amount of time to recover any of the survivors," Henrie said.

Nine bodies were found Friday morning about 200 feet from the fire, and four more were found in Friday evening about 300 to 400 feet farther down the tunnel. Two of the bodies were found about 7:35 p.m., and two a little farther down. Rescue crews hoped to advance several hundred feet more during the night.

"They appeared to be moving in a direction to exit the mine rather than to retreat," Henrie said. However, he added, "The fact we have found people who apparently attempted to evacuate the mine certainly does not preclude the possibility that there were some who attempted to retreat."

Dave Mead, a spokesman for Utah Power & Light, which owns the mine, also confirmed that four more bodies had been found.

The crew battled the fire as it inched through the tunnel, and Henrie described the blaze as "contained but unpredictable."

Henrie, who released the names of some of the dead late Friday, had praise for the miners.

"They were well-seasoned men," he said. "They were among the top operations leadership at Emery Mining. (I have) a deep sense of loss, a great sense of compassion ... it's just a terrible tragedy."

Mine officials and rescuers helped the others had reached a "safe retreat" chamber 2,600 feet farther on. The "rescue team" had been temporarily halted Friday afternoon when it encountered three or four hot spots and had to focus its attention on cooling them.

The mine is made up of horizontal tunnels drilled into the side of a mountain, where the miners were trapped as they worked to beat a one-day tonnage record. There are no vertical shafts.

Earlier Friday, as grief-stricken relatives gathered at the mine, the five-member search team trying to get through to the chambers was temporarily driven back by flying chunks of hot coal and a faulty foam-generating machine.

Repairs to the foam-generating machine were made and the searchers set out again for the 300-foot-long chamber some 1½ miles inside the mine, only to encounter the hot spots that halted their journey a second time.

There was still reason to hope for the survival of the remaining miners, who had not been heard from since the fire started, Henrie said.

"Apparently the air's getting a little better, and the fact that the section is not in bad shape is encouraging," he said. "We have every expectation they will be in the tunnel, hopefully the farthest part of the tunnel."

He said mine safety experts now speculate there could be five or six days' worth of oxygen in the chamber, where before they had said their best guess was two days.

Also, Henrie said a three-inch bore hole being drilled from the adjacent Little Dove Mine 600 feet into the Wilberg chamber could be completed by Friday night, letting air, water and food get to any survivors. However, fed-

Family members say waiting difficult but morale is good

Former Castleford man among trapped miners

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Castleford residents waited anxiously Friday for news of a former resident trapped in the smoldering Wilberg Mine since fire broke out late Wednesday.

Early Friday evening, the news from rescue officials offered hope.

Curt Carter, who farmed in Castleford before becoming a miner, was not listed among the nine dead discovered in the mine near Orangeville, Utah. It was not known if he was among the four bodies found later in the evening.

Rescue officials said the workers trapped farther down in the mine could be alive if they had reached a "safe retreat" chamber 2,600 feet beyond the site where fire broke out.

"We're sorry the others are dead," said Curt's sister, Jeanne Reynolds of Castleford Friday evening. "We pray he will come out."

The waiting is difficult, she said. But the family's morale is good.

"We've got lots of prayers going out," she said. "Everyone is praying for us. That helps."

Carter, almost 30, was born in Halley but has spent most of his life in Castleford. He graduated from Castleford High School and worked with his brother and his father, Buck Carter, on the family farm.

Five years ago he left Idaho to take a job at the Wilberg Mine. "He really enjoyed the work," Reynolds said.

He is married to Janice Novak Carter who grew up in Buhl. In an interview shown on network television news Thursday night, she talked about the couple's four small children and how worried she was.

"Just from seeing her on TV she looks pretty rough, and it's probably breaking her heart. But she's tough," said her brother-in-law Benny Freeman of Buhl after seeing her again on the news Friday. He said he had no recent news from Utah, but that his wife, Janice Carter's sister, had gone down to the Carter's home in Huntington, a town near the mine.

Janice Carter's parents, Martin and Nellie

Novak of Buhl; her sister and brother-in-law, Justine and Lonnie Wright; and Curt Carter's brother, Short Grimm, have also traveled to Utah to wait near the mine for news.

Carter's parents were spending the winter in Arizona when the fire broke out and are traveling to Utah from there.

Reynolds said Carter's wife is calling rescue officials every 20 to 30 minutes for updates on the rescue effort. And Reynolds is staying close to her telephone in Castleford for news of her brother.

Tom Grimm, a second brother of Carter's, also lives in Huntington but does not work at the mine.

Pentagon, other agencies resist Congress' order to save money

By DAVID ESQO
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Resistance from the Pentagon and nearly two dozen other federal agencies probably will mean failure to meet a congressional order to save $3 billion this year on items such as public relations and consultant fees, an administration spokesman indicated Friday.

"We intend to get a majority of the savings," said Steve Tupper, a spokesman at the Office of Management and Budget. "Congress basically ordered it and we're going to come up with as much as we can."

But Tupper declined to predict that the entire $3 billion in savings could be achieved, even though Congress called for the cuts-in-legislation approved earlier this year as part of its effort to cut federal deficits.

The spokesman confirmed that when the 23 agencies were asked to come up with the savings, they replied that only 6 percent of the total, or $246 million, could be trimmed.

Administration records indicate that the Pentagon, asked to save $2.1 billion of the $3 billion sought throughout the government, replied that no savings were possible.

The report comes at a time when the defense budget has come under scrutiny both within the administration and in Congress.

President Reagan decided earlier this week to make relatively small reductions in his defense buildup over the next three years, spurring advice from top aides and many Republicans in Congress that larger cuts are possible without harming the nation's defense capability.

Pressure for additional cuts could be enhanced with the word that the Defense Department, with a budget estimated at $3.4 billion for travel, consultants, public relations and similar items, found that no savings could be made.

The Defense Department aside, the departments of State and Justice, as well as the United States Information Agency and the Small Business Administration, informed OMB director David Stockman that no savings were possible in spending on so-called "overhead" items such as consultants, public relations and advertising, publishing and travel.

The agency that came closest to meeting the OMB target was last month that it could produce 72 percent of the requested savings, or $24 million out of $34 million requested.

Death takes defense chief from USSR's hierarchy

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, a civilian who guided the Soviet arms industry from World War II through the space age, has died at age 76.

He was the fifth senior member of the aging Soviet leadership to die in less than three years.

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported Ustinov's death late in the day Friday, after Politburo member Mikhail S. Gorbachev made an unprecedented announcement in Scotland confirming the death.

"We have had a great loss and a tragic loss of our old friend and comrade Marshal Ustinov, who has passed away," Gorbachev said before cutting short his tour of Britain and flying to Moscow.

Tass said Ustinov, a leading member of the ruling Politburo and defense minister since 1976, died of heart failure at 7:35 p.m. Thursday following a series of medical crises that began in October.

The news agency said he died after suffering pneumonia, undergoing emergency surgery to correct an aneurism — a weakening in the main artery leading from his heart — suffering liver and kidney failure and experiencing problems with blood clotting.

Tass said Politburo member Grigory V. Romanov, a Kremlin official with long experience in the defense industry, was named chairman of the funeral commission for Ustinov — a post that usually goes to the successor of the deceased official.

However, there was no official announcement of Ustinov's successor. His death leaves the Politburo with only 11 members, an aging group that has been reduced in the past 35 months by the deaths of Presidents Leonid I. Brezhnev and Yuri V. Andropov, Communist Party ideologist Mikhail A. Suslov, and Arvid V. Fel'she, the last of the Politburo Bolsheviks.

Reagan to urge allies to accept 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Friday defended his "Star Wars" program and said he will be able to convince British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and other Western allies of the importance of the proposed missile defense system in outer space.

Speaking with reporters before leaving for a pre-Christmas weekend at Camp David, Md., Reagan was asked about Soviet criticism of the new U.S. defense plans. In particular those voiced in London by Mikhail Gorbachev, the No. 2 Kremlin official. Reagan is scheduled to meet with Mrs. Thatcher on Saturday.

Reagan said Gorbachev "doesn't understand exactly what it is we are researching."

"We are going to be very pleased to let them know exactly what it is that we are talking about and I think they'll see that maybe it's better if we have a world in which you've got some kind of a defense that maybe can destroy weapons without killing millions of people," Reagan said. He apparently was referring to the upcoming U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

The president was then asked about reports that the Western allies such as Mrs. Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl were unhappy with the U.S. "Star Wars" concept.

"I'll get them to understand what it is, too,"

Reagan replied, adding that the U.S. proposal was designed to make nuclear weapons "obsolete."

Reagan's comments bolstered those made earlier in the day when administration officials denied that Western European leaders are unhappy about the U.S. proposal.

Mrs. Thatcher, en route to Washington from stops in China and Hong Kong, also maintained there was no dispute over "Star Wars," as the proposed space defense system has been dubbed.

"I've been one of the people who have been most staunchly behind the president in going ahead with the research," she told reporters aboard her plane.

Last Sunday, after meeting with Gorbachev in London, Mrs. Thatcher fueled speculation that she was opposed to Star Wars.

Asked about the project, she said, "Obviously you can't stop research. But I think one does not want to go into a higher and higher level of armaments. You've got to have balance if we're both to feel secure, and obviously it doesn't make sense to have that balance at a higher and higher level."

Mrs. Thatcher was scheduled to arrive in Washington on Friday night, have breakfast with Vice President Bush today and then fly to Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland, for several hours of talks with Reagan before setting out for London. Her visit will last less than 24 hours.

The visit takes on increased significance in light of Mrs. Thatcher's talks with Gorbachev.

She is expected to give Reagan firsthand insight into the thinking of Gorbachev, the No. 2 man in the Kremlin, in advance of exploratory arms control talks in Geneva between Secretary of State George F. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Jan. 7-8.

An administration official, briefing reporters at the White House on Mrs. Thatcher's visit, emphasized that Western allies are united on the U.S. stance for the Geneva meeting.

Third party candidates drew fewest ballots ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale was not the only loser in President Reagan's landslide last month — third party candidates fared worse than in any recent U.S. election.

Official results from all 50 states show that Reagan amassed 54,450,603 votes to his Democratic rival's 37,573,671 — a margin of 16,876,932.

That was twice as many votes as Reagan defeated then-President Jimmy Carter by in 1980, and the second-widest gap in U.S. history. Only Richard M. Nixon, in his 16-million vote win over George McGovern in 1972, had a bigger cushion.

With the electorate facing what Reagan called the "clearest choice in this century between the two major parties," the vote for third party and independent candidates was down sharply from the last four White House races.

According to the certified tallies, as gathered by Associated Press reporters in each state capital, a dozen minor party or independent candidates got only about 600,000 votes this year, led by the Libertarian Party's David Bergland, who was on the ballot in 39 states and got 227,948 votes.

Independent Lyndon LaRouche, the maverick conservative who also ran in the Democratic primaries, was next with 78,773 votes, followed by feminist Susan Johnson, who got 72,153 votes under the Citizens Party banner.

Those figures include write-in votes reported by some, but not all, states. The turnout exceeded 92.6 million votes — 6 million more than in 1980.

Populist Party candidate and former Olympic pole-vaulter Bob Richards got 62,371 votes; Dennis Serrette of the Independent Alliance 47,202; Communist Party chief Gus Hall 35,561; Mel Mason of the Social Workers Party 24,687; Larry Holmes of Workers World 15,220; Delmar Dennis of the American Party 13,150; and Ed Winn of the Workers League 10,881.

There were 16 minor party candidates on various state ballots, but only 10 appeared to get 10,000 or more votes.

Earl F. Dodge of the Prohibition Party got 4,242 votes and Gavriel Holmes, a second Workers World candidate in some states, 2,718.

John B. Anderson, the former Illinois Republican congressman who got 5.7 million votes as an Independent in 1980, endorsed Mondale, but his name was still on the ballot in Kentucky under the banner of the National Unity Party of Kentucky. He got 1,479 votes.

In Nevada, voters had a chance to cast a ballot for "none of the above," and 3,650 did. In Massachusetts, 33,601 people left their presidential ballots blank. New York officials reported 194,108 ballots were blank, void or scattered among little-known candidates.

Murder charges filed in slayings, robbery

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Charges of first-degree murder were filed Friday against two men accused of opening fire on workers and customers during a robbery at a Geromino bank last week, and the district attorney said he would seek the death penalty in the case.

District Attorney Dick Tannery said he filed four counts "co-jointly" in county district court here against Jay Wesley Neill and Robert Grady Johnson, who are being held without bond in California.

"We also filed a bill of particulars with the court advising them we will ask for the death penalty once the case is brought to trial," Tannery said.

Four people were killed and three wounded in the Dec. 14 robbery of the First Bank of Chattanooga branch in Geromino. An eighth person in the bank, a 12-month-old infant, was unharmed, and about $17,000 was stolen.

Tanner said he also filed three counts of shooting with intent to kill involving those wounded at the bank, and one count of attempted shooting with intent to kill involving the infant.

The two were arrested by the FBI on Monday after federal agents were tipped that they were spending lavishly on entertainment, clothes and a hotel suite. Authorities said some of the $50 bills they used had serial numbers on record at the Geromino bank. In a federal court appearance Friday in San Francisco, U.S. Magistrate Wayne Brazil granted the request of Johnson, 22, to be sent to Oklahoma immediately in federal custody.

A lawyer for Neill, 19, had asked Brazil to keep Johnson in San Francisco until Neill's scheduled preliminary hearing Thursday.

But Brazil refused, saying Johnson could be returned from Oklahoma if needed. And Johnson's lawyer, Jerrold Ladar, said Johnson would refuse to testify at the hearing.

Miserable weather across nation marks official first day of winter

By The Associated Press

Winter officially opened Friday with a mixture of rain and snow on a fast track from the eastern Plains to New England that caused flooding in Arkansas and ice roads across the Midwest.

Meanwhile, that odd December hurricane loitered in the Atlantic.

In the Northwest, northern Oregon was blanketed with snow and ice that closed roads around Portland and left streets and freeways littered with abandoned cars and trucks before a melting trend began during the day.

Travelers' advisories warning of rain, sleet and snow with hazardous travel conditions were posted from Pennsylvania into New England as an intensifying storm headed out of the Plains, with up to 6 inches of snow possible across the mountains of northern New England.

"My guess is the mountains will probably get a bomb job — some really heavy snow," meteorologist Art Lester of the National Weather Service said at Portland, Maine. "A foot would not be out of the question."

Winter officially arrived at 9:23 a.m. MST, and the National Weather Service said snow started falling in southwestern New York within half an hour. For the eighth year in a row, Farmington, Maine, celebrated "Chester Greenwood Day," its annual salute to the native son credited with inventing the earmuff more than a century ago.

An extensive area of rain stretched from the mid Atlantic Coast to the mid- and lower Mississippi Valley, with snow, sleet and freezing rain over the Great Lakes and parts of the northern Plains.

Heavy rain in northwestern Arkansas during the night had water up to the doorsteps of houses in parts of Rogers.

Highways snowy

By The Associated Press

Millions of Americans began the long Christmas weekend Friday, many encountering snowy highways on visits to friends, relatives and vacation spots.

The National Safety Council estimated that between 370 and 470 people could be killed in traffic accidents in the period starting at 6 p.m. Friday and ending at midnight Tuesday.

Alabama senator dies at age 89

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Sen. Lister Hill, who wrote national health-care laws and helped force legislation creating the Tennessee Valley Authority, was remembered Friday as "one of the most effective and far-sighted political leaders of our time."

The Alabama Democrat, who served 30 years in the Senate and 15 years in the House before his retirement in 1968, died of pneumonia Thursday at a Montgomery hospital. He was 89.

Hill co-authored the Hill-Burton Act in 1946, which provided federal money to build hospitals across the nation, primarily in poor and rural areas, with stipulations on providing some free care to indigents.

Eric Cain, 17, is ready to leave the hospital

Teen gets fingers back after mishap

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Eight days after he lost two fingers in a sausage grinder, a Hermiston teen-ager left the hospital Friday with all 10 of his digits intact.

Eric A. Cain, 17, should be able to use his fingers well enough to type, but he may not regain all the feeling in them, said Dr. Jerry E. Nye, who performed emergency surgery to reattach the fingers.

"He won't be normal, but he'll be able to use them," Nye said. "The odds are better because he's young."

Cain's left index and middle fingers were cut off Dec. 13, when he slipped on the floor at his parents' home. Here's the Beef market. To keep from falling, he said, he grabbed the sausage grinder. But before he knew it, his hand had slipped inside.

Cain said the grinder parts inside still were moving slowly because he had just unplugged it. Had it still been running, he said, he would have lost his arm.

"When I saw the fingers drop out of the machine onto the floor, I was more shocked than in pain," Cain said. His cries of "My finger! My finger!" alerted his cousin Joe, who works part time at the meat market.

His cousin, who has been trained as a paramedic, immediately put the fingers on ice.

The ice turned out to be crucial, since visibility was zero at Hermiston that night and Cain had to be driven to Portland by ambulance instead of being flown.

Nye, a hand surgery specialist, was waiting at Providence Medical Center to begin a 9½-hour operation at midnight. Through microsurgery, he reconnected the bones, tendons, veins, arteries and nerves in the two fingers.

Six space shuttle missions due in 1985

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space agency announced Friday it plans six shuttle missions in the first seven months of 1985, starting with the Department of Defense flight, next month which will carry a secret cargo.

The flight manifest, released at the headquarters of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, calls for a flight a month through May, skipping June, then a Spacelab flight in July.

NASA officials said a manifest for the balance of 1985 is incomplete but should be released next month. It may include six more missions, most of which will involve the launch of communications satellites.

The flights—lasting a total of 30 days, not counting the military mission, will carry a total of 36 astronauts into orbit with shuttles Discovery and Challenger each making three flights.

The schedule includes the launch of six communications satellites, recovery of a scientific satellite and two Spacelab missions.

The first mission, aboard Discovery, is the Defense Department flight set for launch Jan. 23. The government has said it will not release any information about the cargo, but sources have described it as an intelligence-gathering satellite to be launched into orbit over the Soviet Union.

NASA did not announce how many crew members the flight would have, but the Air Force confirmed earlier there would be three NASA astronauts and an Air Force captain on board.

Information about the length of the mission was also withheld. But it is expected to be the shortest of next year's shuttle flights.

On Feb. 20, Challenger will be launched with a crew of six on a four-day mission that will include the launch of two communications satellites.

One of these satellites, the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite-B, will be the second of a communications systems to be used by NASA to relay TV pictures and high data rate signals to Earth, giving virtually 100 percent communications between shuttles and the Earth during subsequent missions. At present, there are brief communications gaps when a shuttle is out of radio contact.

Discovery will be launched March 19 for a five-day mission that will include the recovery of a scientific satellite that was left in orbit last April 6. It was deployed to test the long-term effects of space on a variety of coatings, paints and metals.

Challenger will be launched April 30 with a crew of seven on a seven-day mission that will concentrate on science. A Spacelab module will be carried in the cargo bay and the crew will include five NASA astronauts and two payload specialists, all of whom are Americans, NASA spokesman Steve Nesbitt said.

Nation's editors back Post's satellite report

WASHINGTON (AP) — On their editorial pages and in an informal survey, a number of newspaper editors support the Washington Post's decision to report about an upcoming spy satellite launch in defiance of a Pentagon request to keep the story secret.

And many of them dispute the Defense Department's contention that the article may have endangered national security.

"If that's big news to the Soviets, they must have been hibernating in Siberia," said the Tribune of Oakland, Calif., in an editorial.

Leonard Pardue, the acting executive editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Louisville Times in Kentucky, said, "Someone should give Cap Weinberger a tranquilizer. He badly overreacted to the Post story."

The Kansas City Times saw a broader issue in the controversy, namely the rights of the news media versus the right of the government to maintain secrecy.

The Times said in an editorial that wrong motives are often inferred from government secrecy, with some claiming "censorship, intimidation," and asking "what are they trying to hide? And anyway, everybody already knows that stuff, including the Russians."

The paper asked why the military "seldom be given the benefit of the doubt?"

However, John Seligenthaler, publisher of The Tennessean in Nashville, Tenn., said he had read every word of the Post story and could not see how it could have "endangered either my security as a citizen or the security of our country."

After the Post ran its story Wednesday, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger criticized the paper's decision as the "height of journalistic irresponsibility" and suggested the story hurt the nation's security.

The story reported that the space shuttle next month will put into orbit a satellite capable of intercepting radio, telephone and satellite communications.

It was printed two days after the Air Force announced strict secrecy would surround the shuttle mission and Air Force Brig. Gen. Richard Abel told reporters at a briefing that any story about the mission—even a speculative story—"may be investigated as a breach of national security."

Other news organizations, including The Associated Press and NBC News, had the same information that the Post printed but voluntarily withheld it at the request of the Pentagon. After the Post ran its story, the other organizations carried their own.

Schroeder scanned for causes of strokes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Nuclear medicine specialists scanned William J. Schroeder's brain and around his new artificial heart for a second time Friday, looking for the cause of a series of small strokes.

The radiologist scan to pinpoint possible blood clots in Schroeder's brain or around the mechanical heart was conducted by specialists from Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville, Tenn.

Schroeder, 52, still suffers some memory loss and is occasionally depressed because of the strokes a week ago, his doctors have said.

But the Jasper, Ind., resident had been described as in good spirits Thursday when his room was outfitted with an artificial Christmas tree and more gifts and greetings flooded into Humana Hospital Audubon.

"He particularly enjoyed the basketball signed by the Jasper High School Wildcats and indicated he wants to use it in his physical therapy exercises," Humana Inc. spokesman Robert Irvine said Friday.

Schroeder "slept well... after quite an eventful day" that included a late visit by a man Irvine described as "an old fishing buddy."

Irvine said the man told Schroeder "he was looking forward to taking him fishing again. Schroeder replied, 'Blessing!'"

"He also was pleased to see his wife (Margaret) on television and all the presents that have been delivered from Jasper," Irvine said.

Mikhail Gorbachev and his wife Raisa are presented with a bouquet of flowers

Gorbachev breaks precedent with Ustinov announcement

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev broke precedent Friday by telling reporters in Scotland that Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov was dead two hours before the official Soviet announcement in Moscow.

Gorbachev's action was considered a sign of his power in the Kremlin, and also provided an illustration of the secrecy surrounding the lives and deaths of Soviet leaders.

Gorbachev, widely believed to be No. 2 in the Kremlin behind President Konstantin U. Chernenko, was just starting a tour of Scottish castles on the seventh of his scheduled eight days in Britain when unofficial reports in Moscow said Ustinov had died.

Gorbachev broke off his visit in Edinburgh and before flying back to the Soviet capital, called a sudden news conference at Edinburgh airport. He replied to a reporter's question about the reason for his departure, saying:

"My presence is required as a member of the Politburo."

"We have had a great loss and a tragic loss of our old friend and comrade Marshal Ustinov, who has passed away."

It was the first time the death of a Soviet leader had been reported by a fellow member of the Politburo prior to the official announcement. Gorbachev could have ignored the question. The fact that he gave a straightforward answer suggested he has sufficient authority to act on his own in a hierarchy that normally emphasizes collective announcements and decisions.

The death was not announced by the official news agency Tass until after Gorbachev had left Edinburgh and more than 24 hours after Ustinov's death.

Until then, the foreign and defense ministries in Moscow and other Soviet officials refused to confirm that Ustinov had died.

The official announcement said Ustinov died at 7:35 p.m. Thursday. But the first unofficial reports began to seep out on Friday.

The first clue to Ustinov's death was provided by the coincidence that the Hall of Columns in the House of Unions where dead leaders traditionally lie in state is now the site of the "World Chess Championship" between two Soviet players.

Chess officials said there would be no match Friday or Monday because the hall was to be used for what one aide was "higher reason."

An Associated Press reporter who went to the House of Unions was told by an employee that Ustinov had died, would lie in state there over the weekend and be buried on Monday.

A few hours later Gorbachev confirmed the death.

The Tass announcement said Politburo member Grigori V. Romanov, 61, was named to head the funeral commission. In the Soviet Union, the job of heading the funeral arrangements normally goes to the successor.

Romanov and the 53-year-old Gorbachev were mentioned as two of the leading contenders to succeed Yuri V. Andropov as head of the Communist Party when Andropov died in February.

But the Politburo decided not to give the post to one of the Kremlin's younger generation and instead picked the 73-year-old Chernenko to head the party and become president.

OPEC ministers may scrap honor system, start policing

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC ministers proposed Friday that the oil cartel scrap its often-violated honor system and begin policing members to enforce agreements on prices and production.

Concluding three days of closed-door talks in the Intercontinental Hotel, the 13 oil ministers made no change in their basic price of $29 a barrel and reaffirmed a production limit of 16 million barrels a day.

But they shelved a plan to readjust their pricing system for the wide range of crude oils, deciding that creating an enforcement system was the best way to restore credibility to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, who was chairman of the meeting, told reporters the conference was suspended until Dec. 27, when the ministers would reconvene to vote on the enforcement system.

No details of the plan were announced, but several ministers said its aim was to verify sales volumes and pricing practices by all OPEC members.

"This is a new thing altogether that will have detailed auditing and that supposedly will make the system more transparent in terms of volume and price," said Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, the oil minister of Kuwait.

No minister said his country opposed the idea.

Belkacem Nabl, the Algerian oil minister, said the system might include independent auditors in member countries to report sales and pricing deals to the OPEC secretariat in Vienna, Austria.

Policing its members is a radical departure from past OPEC practice. "What it tells you is that they're trying to become a real cartel," said Joseph Stanislaw, director of international economics at the Paris office of Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

For them, the first step is knowing what (each member is) doing," he said in a telephone interview.

OPEC now has no means of strictly monitoring either the sales or pricing agreements that member countries make with oil buyers. The group's leaders have often expressed pride in the code of voluntary compliance that has prevailed since the organization was created in 1960.

At an emergency meeting, OPEC ministers decided on Oct. 31 to cut production nearly 9 percent from the 17.5 million barrels a day level that had prevailed in an attempt to shore up prices.

Bhopal work gets delayed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Union Carbide workers in Bhopal put off for a day the processing into pesticides of the remaining deadly methyl isocyanate gas, a cloud of which leaked early this month and killed 2,000 people, the state-run media said late Friday.

The state-controlled radio and television said the remaining 1.5 tons of methyl isocyanate would be processed today.

However, the United News of India quoted unidentified sources at the U.S.-based company as saying the last six drums of the deadly chemical were processed late Friday, ending the six-day procedure dubbed "Operation Faith" which was designed to reassure local residents they would not live in danger again.

Iraqi jetfighters hit two ships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said jet fighters raised two "large naval targets" in the Persian Gulf on Friday, and shipping sources confirmed a Norwegian supertanker and a smaller Liberian tanker were hit.

Two crewmen were reported killed on the Liberian vessel.

Gulf shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, first reported that the 114,000-ton Norwegian supertanker Thorshavet, fully laden with 232,000 tons of Iranian crude oil destined for Japan, was hit about 30 miles south of Kharg and that two of the crew perished in the raid. The rest reportedly got safely off the ship.

They said two dozen Spanish and Norwegian crew members safely abandoned ship and were picked up by Iranian helicopters but that the captain and chief officer stayed with the Thorshavet.

Hours later, the London-based Lloyds Shipping Intelligence unit reported that the 52,661-ton Liberian tanker Magnolia was attacked about 30 miles south of Kharg and that two of the crew perished in the raid. The rest reportedly got safely off the ship.

The attacks were the latest in a recent spate of almost daily forays by Iraqi warplanes against tankers and freighters plying Iranian waters. Baghdad's avowed aim is to tighten its yearlong blockade and economically choke Iran out of a war that began in September 1980 in retaliatory raids. Iran has been targeting vessels in the southern gulf.

The Iraqi military spokesman in Baghdad, capital of Iraq, said "direct hits" were scored in Friday's attacks at 12:30 p.m.

By the count of the Lloyds intelligence unit, 62 tankers and freighters have been damaged since January.

The Thorshavet's Norwegian captain, Egil Vindresen, and his chief officer stayed behind to help in the salvage operation.

The shipping sources said the Thorshavet was hit by a heat-seeking, water-skimming Exocet missile and that the missile hit a starboard tank and may have also set the engine room and accommodation quarters on fire.

Salvage tugboats radioed their head offices in Manama they were confident they could bring the fire under control "but the cargo was burning."

Prince Henry christened in ceremony

LONDON (AP) — The British royal family gathered Friday at Windsor Castle for the christening of 3-month-old Prince Henry, second son of the Prince and Princess of Wales and third in line to the throne.

The notable absence of his aunt, Princess Anne, caused press speculation she was annoyed at not being chosen as a godparent for Henry. The baby, known to his family and most of the British public as Prince Harry, was christened Prince Henry Charles Albert David by Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie in the castle's 15th-century St. George's Chapel, burial place of 10 British monarchs.

What's what

If your town's civic bosses let the community swimming pool lose money all winter, consider this: Stock it with pan-size trout, decree nothing but cheese balls can be used for bait, and charge fisherfolk $1 an hour to drop in their lines.

Optimist: "This is the best of all possible worlds."
Pessimist: "Fraid you're right."

If that Seasoned Citizen always thereafter by governments worldwide. What pattern?

A. He didn't know where he was going, didn't know where he was when he got there, and did it all on borrowed money. Or so goes the old joke.

Q. Catching mice is a characteristic and instinctive trait in cats. Is it not?

A. Characteristic, yes. Instinctive, no. Laboratory kittens have been raised with laboratory mice as playmates, never harming same. Introduce older cats that kill. The kittens learn then. They, too, thereafter kill. A footnote: In this matter of mice killing, once the kittens learn it, they never unlearn it.

COLUMBUS PATTERN

Q. You once said Christopher Columbus lay down a pattern followed prohibits picturing a living person in U.S. currency? Inquires a client: The Clark incident. In the early 1860s, Spencer M. Clark was chief clerk in the U.S. Treasury, later the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. For no explained reason, his likeness turned up on 500,000 five-cent notes. U.S. senators and representatives they. who so dearly needed personal publicity of their own -- turned in righteous indignation. And promptly passed the no-living-person rider to the first upcoming bill assured of passage.

Those who run roulette games say most players favor the odd number over the even.

Used widely in Japan of late is a 27-cent disposable umbrella.

Library fines can be paid with food as 'amnesty'

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — A can of food will help take care of not only a needy family but also a reader's library. The Schaumburg Township Public Library is giving good-canned stuff amnesty to families of Schaumburg Township.

A single can of food will substitute for any fine up to the library's maximum of $5 under the holiday-season program, which is in its third year in this Chicago suburb.

No matter how late a book is, a can of food will pay the bill. One recently returned book was due in November 1993.

"We get soup. We get vegetables. It's not all generic items. People are giving good-canned stuff," Jane O'Brien, head of the circulation department, said Friday.

"They (readers) just love it, and some even pay their fines in addition to canned goods," she said.

Ms. O'Brien said people also have been donating toys and even money — a total of $30 from patrons and $50 more from library employees.

"Most people are giving in the Christmas spirit," said Roy Mansberger, head of the library's maintenance program and the man who thought up the program.

Mansberger said librarians were discussing the problem of missing books. "And I thought of an amnesty idea — that if they brought in food, people would be more likely to bring back a book," he said.

This year, the library has collected about 20 cases of food in addition to eight or nine cases at its Hoffman Estates branch. The amnesty runs through Dec. 31 and applies to all library items except video and reference materials.

Ms. O'Brien said the number of books returned increases notably in December.

Card exchange stays same

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Two Pennsylvania couples don't spend more than the cost of a stamp when they exchange Christmas cards. They have been mailing the same one back and forth for 45 years.

It began as a joke when Paul E. Weaver, 70, a retired painter, mailed a special holiday greeting to his future sister-in-law, Mary Nystrom, in 1939, when he was dating her sister, Dorothy.

The small card, picturing a child in kilts and a Scottish terrier, is inscribed in Scottish dialect.

"Sae put it i' yer cedar chest, Awa' frae dirt an' stain. An perhaps I willna ever Hae to buy ye one again."

"She used to razz me about being tight," Weaver said. "I was light because I didn't have any money."

The next Christmas, Mrs. Nystrom and her husband, Carl, returned the card to Weaver, by then married to her sister.

The tradition has continued ever since.

Liberty's flame in parade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ninety-eight years after it first glowed over the waters of New York Harbor, the flame from the Statue of Liberty's torch arrived in Southern California, bound for the top of the lead float in the Tournament of Roses Parade.

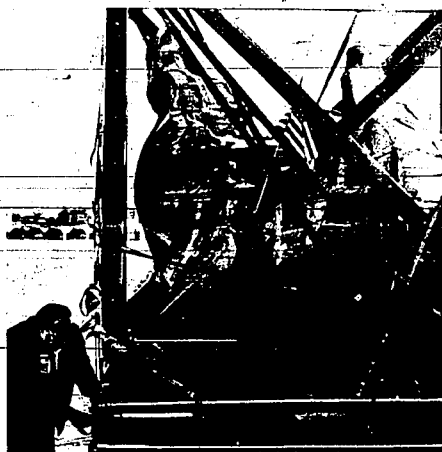

The 7½-foot tall, 650-pound glass and metal frame structure, surrounded by a transparent Plexiglas case, was taken from a specially fitted air freighter at Los Angeles International Airport and loaded on to the back of a flatbed truck on Thursday.

During the drive to Fiesta Floats in Temple City, about 25 miles northeast of the airport, the flame was guarded by U.S. Park Service rangers and escorted by police.

The structure "arrived in good shape," said Jean Ash of the Ellis Island Foundation Inc.

The torch will be attached to Hilton Hotels' "Sweet Land of Liberty" float, which will lead the Jan. 1 Pasadena parade, whose theme this year is "The Spirit of America."

Don Anderson, president of Fiesta Floats, said his workers will "treat

Part of the Statue of Liberty will lead the Roses Parade the torch with utmost care," using a specially built reinforced frame to hold it in place on the float.

The flame was detached from the statue as it undergoes a $230 million renovation in time for the centennial of its dedication in 1886. The flame, buffeted for nearly a century by ocean air and winds, will not be returned to the restored statue.

Utah governor 'disappointed' by action on Dugway lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gov. Scott M. Matheson says he is "disappointed" Attorney General David L. Wilkinson is holding back full support, in the state's name, of a lawsuit seeking to stop more biological testing at Dugway Proving Ground.

Blaze guts Vegas hotel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fire of a suspicious nature raced through a four-story vacant hotel in downtown Las Vegas before dawn Friday.

No injuries were reported. Some 75 firefighters and 20 units fought the blaze for two hours before bringing it under control.

The fire left a heavy pall of smoke over the downtown area, with the smoke continuing to hang over a section of downtown's Glitter Gulch at dawn.

The building had been recently purchased by the nearby Golden Nugget hotel and was scheduled for demolition Monday. The area was to be cleared and used for hotel parking, according to hotel spokesman Steve Schiffman.

Fire Inspector Grant Grove said the blaze appeared suspicious and that persons were seen standing near the building before the blaze began about 3:30 a.m.

son to intervene in the state's name in a lawsuit, filed by the Foundation on Economic Trends, that asks no further work to expand Dugway's capabilities to test hazardous biological substances.

Thursday, the Attorney General's office replied to Matheson by letter that the state has learned the U.S. Army has put its expansion plans on hold and is considering the "strong" position of the lawsuit.

For that reason, wrote Assistant Attorney General Fred G. Nelson, Utah will hold back in attempting to enter the lawsuit.

Matheson's only comment, relayed through a spokesman, was that he was "disappointed."

Nelson noted that Wilkinson is considering an offer by the counsel for the plaintiffs — which include writer

Jeremy Rifkin and Gene R. La Rocco, a retired admiral, — to add Utah as a plaintiff in a later amended complaint.

In the meantime, Wilkinson will discuss the issue with Gov.-elect Norman Bangerter and consult with the Utah Department of Agriculture.

The lawsuit asks a permanent injunction against further Army activities in the contested area, asserting that the biological agents proposed to be tested should be tested safely through being simulated by innocuous test pathogens "extremely dangerous" should a leak occur.

A Senate subcommittee has approved funds to expand the biological warfare testing center at Dugway to allow testing of equipment to protect U.S. soldiers from such attacks.

Parachutists leap from L.A. building

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three parachutists floated from the top of the 48-story Wells Fargo building downtown, then sped away in a car after landing safely on a parking garage, witnesses said.

The jumpers were gone by the time police were summoned Thursday, and their identities were not known.

"I work on the 34th floor and I saw one go right by my window," said Leslie Mannon, a worker in the Arco skyscraper. "Then I looked out and saw two more below going down."

Several other workers reported seeing the chutists float by Thursday morning and said they landed atop a garage. They then jumped into a station wagon and drove off.

Blaine GOP gives Chadband mixed review

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Republicans in Blaine County are giving a mixed but concerned reaction to the allegations of voter fraud and illegal county election by supporters of Rep. George Hansen.

In general, they say that if there are any problems in the county they want them cleared up.

But some say many of the allegations made in a lawsuit challenging the election filed in Boise, and further charges made by state Rep. J.F. Chadband, are without merit.

"My thinking is that if it's any county, if someone smells a rat, they should check it out," says Marty Orwig, chairman of the Republican party in Blaine County.

"I'm talking people, I'm not talking party,"

Orwig says. She adds that if the problem is with the Republicans, they too should be investigated.

"Not all the county's Republican leadership accepts the view of some Hansen supporters that many of the voters in the county are illegally registered, and that the voting situation in the county is a 'smelly situation,' as Chadband charges.

"I think if (Hansen) lost, he ought to say he lost and that's it," says Blaine County Commissioner Rupert House, a Republican who was re-elected in November.

The lawsuit challenges the election that saw Hansen lose to Democrat Richard Stallings 4,113 to 1,481 in Blaine County.

It claims that some 2,500 votes were made by people who were improperly registered because they did not use their home addresses as state law requires.

If those votes are disallowed, it would give Hansen a district-wide victory after losing to Stallings by only 133 votes.

With the Idaho Supreme Court turning down his petition for a recount on Friday, the challenge to Blaine County's vote is the Republican incumbent's last hope to retain his Congressional seat.

County Clerk Marie Ivie, a Democrat, says that many of the voters without home addresses listed on computer printouts of registered voters are those who registered before it was required show a home address.

The state Legislature decided to require a home address for voter registration following the 1980 Republican challenge to the election of state Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, also in Blaine County.

But, Ivie says, many Blaine County residents do not have addresses, but a rural addressing system being put in is nearly completed. That may solve the re-occurring problem the county is having, Ivie says.

Blaine County Commissioner Robert Gardner, another Republican, agrees that the rural addressing system may help the problem.

"Even know where I live, now," he says. Among those registered voters who do not list a home address are Gardner and House.

Other Blaine County Republicans re-elected to office in November are Sheriff Dennis Haynes and Coroner Russ Mikel.

Gardner's address is listed as Bellevue

House's address is listed as Hailey, but he lives about six miles north of Hailey as the crow flies and only a couple miles from the Sun Valley city limits, again in a straight line.

Mikel lists his address as the "Buttercup subdivision" and Haynes as "north-of-Hailey."

In fact, the only Blaine County official elected in November's election to show an actual residential address is Democrat Keith Roark, the county's prosecutor, who listed his residence as 117 Spruce St. It is an old address.

Steve Bolter, chairman of the Magic Valley Republican party, lists his address as "south of Bellevue."

Gardner recognizes that the county has a "transient" population with many people moving in and out. But, he says, he believes the county's voters are as legal as those in other counties.

"I suspect that they are legal. I'd be disappointed if they weren't," says the Republican who will begin his second term in January.

School battle brings losses

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Monte

Katzenberger and Sandy Braga won't be teaching at the Sawtooth Elementary School in Twin Falls next year.

They are two casualties of the communications breakdown between the teachers union and the school board, they say.

"Though their dissatisfaction is older than the current contract fight, the board's Tuesday night decision to unilaterally adopt its last contract offer has been the last straw, and they are looking to leave the profession, or the area, they say.

For Katzenberger, now in his seventh year as a teacher, the problem is financial. He says everyone wants a bigger piece of the pie when the district really needs a bigger pie. "I think Carl Snow knows where we're at, the district is in a financially terrible situation. I don't know how the district can survive financially," he says.

With the district locked into a 5 percent annual growth in the tax base by law, the financial situation is not viable, Katzenberger says.

"I'm even asking myself is it a viable career for a single-income person," he says.

Katzenberger faults the district for not sitting down with teachers and citizens to work out a mutually acceptable solution to the district's financial problems.

In search of a career that will allow him to support his family and leave his wife at home, Katzenberger will either go directly to school for his degree in business administration or work in the private sector before going to school.

"I could have become a really super teacher in another six years, but what I get to show for it? I'm not getting a good return on my investment," he says. Katzenberger planned and directed the placement of a computer lab in the Sawtooth school over the summer.

For Braga, whose husband can support their family, trust is the major issue.

Potatoes go out as Christmas gifts

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

RUPERT — A cook may not remember the unadorned Idaho potato that comes in a 20-pound bag in the grocery store. "And diners normally don't know that the one with the steak at the supper club grew up in Idaho's fields.

But dress it up in a box under the Christmas tree, surround it with recipes, and the Idaho spud becomes a gourmet gift that gives new meaning to holiday baking.

Two Rupert businesses count on that appeal. Rolland Jones Potatoes, Inc. and Max Herbold Inc. send the state-famous potatoes nationwide in time to join the toys under the trees.

Both companies are warehouse operations. They're geared up to ship out railroad cars of potatoes at a time.

Yet, a few years ago, customers began asking Roger Jones, owner of Rolland Jones Potatoes, to put together small boxes that they could send to friends — something like a fruit basket for the oven.

The company's 50-pound packages obviously were too large. What finally emerged four years ago was the Idaho Baker's Dozen. "There are 13 of them, of course, and about 10 ounces for each potato. That's the perfect baking size," he says.

But weight is just the beginning of what it takes to package a prime potato, says Jones and Dennis Herbold, owner of Max Herbold Inc.

The potatoes are hand-picked as they come off the sizing machines. They must have excellent shape, as close to a golden brown color as possible, and a smooth cover. The potatoes also must be bruise or blemish free.

These are showpiece potatoes, ambassadors of Idaho — not the base for potato soup.

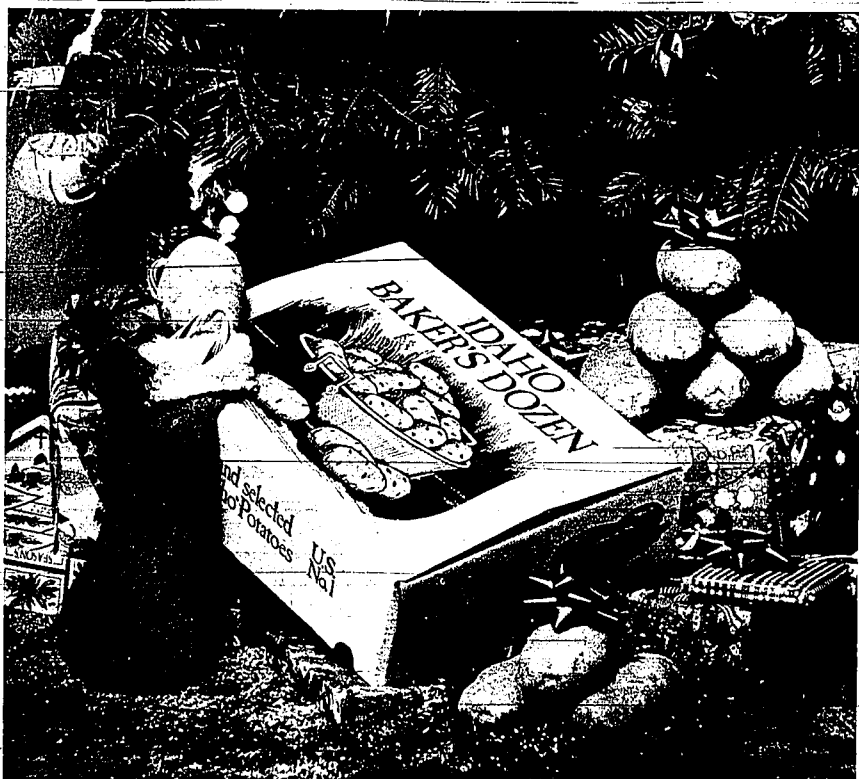

Keeping that quality also causes problems. Both companies have developed styrofoam insulation and special packing for their potatoes.

In addition, Jones, who mails out 5,000 to 6,000 boxes yearly, opened a supermarket in another six years, but what I get to show for it? I'm not getting a good return on my investment," he says. Katzenberger planned and directed the placement of a computer lab in the Sawtooth school over the summer.

For Braga, whose husband can support their family, trust is the major issue.

The Idaho Baker's Dozen — complete with 13 potatoes — will be appearing under Christmas trees around the nation

Jones has started bypassing Denver and shipping boxes of potatoes by truck down to a town near Dallas. He says that in past years, many Baker's Dozens were frozen at the Denver Post Office, ruining them and upsetting the people who received them.

"One year, we froze about 750 boxes (there), and at $13.95 a box, that gets pretty expensive," he said. Now Herbold says he hasn't had as many problems with freezing, although occasionally a cold snap will damage shipments.

This company turns out a bigger box — about 15 pounds — for $15.95. The company, which started mailing the gift packs about three years ago, handles about 2,000 boxes yearly, with most of them going out around Christmas.

Herbold markets the gift packs with a potato cowboy: "It sports a 16-gallon hat and kerchief.

Marketing is an important part of the potato appeal. It reinforces the Idaho reputation. "What we want to do is put the premium baking potato in their (recipients') hands," he says.

But, even with shipments in the thousands of boxes yearly, neither company is making much, if any, profit on their gift potatoes.

County jail suicide investigation brings no change in current policy

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No policy changes will be made at the Twin Falls County Jail as a result of the death of a California man who hanged himself Wednesday in jail cell.

The suicide of 22-year-old Timothy Earl Courtney was the second at the jail within a seven-month period.

Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said at a Friday news conference that the Twin Falls police, who investigated the incident, ruled the death a suicide. The police also found that the sheriff's office had provided "adequate supervision."

Courtney, who was arrested Tuesday morning for possessing about 1.5 ounces of cocaine, hanged himself with a bed sheet tied to the bars of a holding cell. His body was found shortly before he was scheduled to make an appearance in court.

Courtney had been placed under a 24-hour watch of a deputy after his arrest because he told deputies he was a homosexual, had attempted suicide previously and used about four grams of cocaine per day, Baxter said. For those reasons, Courtney was segrgated and placed under surveillance, she said.

About an hour before Courtney's court hearing at 1 p.m., the 24-hour watch was pulled, Munn said. Lt. Jim Hopkins, the jail administrator and Deputy Wayne Tousey, assistant jail administrator, felt the intensive watch no longer was required because of Courtney's behavior to that point, Munn added.

Courtney still was under constant audio surveillance by the dispatcher because of a two-way monitor in the cell, the sheriff said.

Courtney was last seen alive by a deputy at 12:25 p.m. About 20 minutes later, Courtney was found dead. Police believe the death occurred between 12:25 and 12:45 p.m., Baxter said.

A report from pathologist Dr. John Martin, who performed an autopsy, said the cause of death was a fractured larynx, Baxter said. "It was unknown if Courtney was under the influence of drugs because blood, tissue and urine tests were not yet completed.

Based on the results of the police investigation, there was no reason to file criminal charges, Baxter said.

"I don't know how we can change it," he added.

Last June, Richard Ray Bradley, who was convicted of rape, was found hanged by a towel in a jail cell. Bradley's family has filed a claim with the county claiming negligence.

"When asked how the county could prevent further claims, Baxter said the only precaution would be to build a new jail. In a new facility, it would be possible to place security risks under constant surveillance by television, she said.

Munn reported that about once every six weeks the jail staff deals with a person who needs watching or segregation from the other inmates. Besides those factors involving Courtney, inmates can be placed under a watch or isolated because they are violent, are disciplinary problems or have medical problems or use drugs.

"At the time Courtney was arrested, the cells designated for segregating inmates were filled, Munn said.

Munn added that if a person was determined to kill himself, then no matter the precautions — including placing him in a padded cell — he still would find a way.

Kloos goes to Georgia

bankruptcy trustee Teresa Kloos checked in with city police Friday and then left for Georgia to spend Christmas with her family, according to city police and FBI officials.

Kloos had been scheduled to be arraigned Friday in Fifth District Magistrate Court on a felony charge of writing a check for insufficient funds to purchase a travel trailer.

But the arraignment was postponed until early January, city police officials report. On Wednesday, Kloos appeared before federal Judge Mikel Itagan on charges of fraudulently diverting more than $206,000 in bankruptcy liquidation sale money for her own use.

She was released on a $5,000 unsecured bond stipulated by Itagan.

Initially, Itagan ordered Kloos to remain in southwestern Idaho and report weekly to probation officers, according to U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Ring.

Blaine

His first term was spent as a Democrat.

Chadbad has made many allegations concerning the vote problems in Blaine County.

"There are those that are not easily proven or disproven. These include:

"That up to 44 percent of voters in some Ketchum precincts do not have telephones, while the county average is 44 percent."

"That the 10 first voters who were checked out in Ketchum have second homes and are also registered voters in other states."

Others are more easily dealt with.

Chadbad has been quoted as saying that Blaine County is a Democrat-dominated county where "apoplectic officials control the outcome of the elections."

The facts and county Republicans dispute that.

"I think it's pretty well split," says House. "It used to be the case where Democrats dominated. Now, 'I think people more or less vote for the person.'"

In the 14 contested and uncontested races on the county's 422-ballot — from president to coroner —

Republicans won seven, Democrats six and one was a virtual tie.

The county elected four Republicans and one Democrat to office. The Democrat, and one Republican were unopposed.

Republicans won all contested races. Now, the county has five elected Republicans and two elected Democrats in office.

Blaine County voters went for President Reagan, Sen. James McClure, state Rep. Mack Neibaur and state senator-elect Larry Anderson in non-county races.

Overall in the November election, Democrats received 51 percent of the votes cast in all races.

The Republicans also are disputing the registration of voters between the May primary election and the general election.

In all, I've says, 1,434, or 20.6 percent, of the county's 4,402 voters were registered between elections.

"That's highly unusual," says Orwig.

However, in 1980, the county had 41.8 percent of its voters register between elections.

Chadbad charges that I've appointed four Democratic "roving registrars" to register voters after she was advised not to by the secretary of state.

I've says she appointed six roving registrars, four Democrats and two Republicans, only after both parties requested that she do so. Those selected were recommended by the parties.

However, I've says the secretary of the state did not advise her not to use roving registrars, a claim backed up by Deputy Secretary of State for Elections Ben Ysursa.

Ysursa says he talked with I've about the situation after the election. He says it is up to each county clerk to decide whether or not to use roving registrars. It would be out of place for him to advise a clerk to use or not to use them, he says.

But, in retrospect, he says, it would have been wiser for I've not to use them since they were a part of the Peavey challenge in 1980.

Battle

The board does not trust teachers and they cannot trust the board, she says.

Teachers aren't given keys to the school, while janitors and secretaries are and teacher curriculum committees met for months only to have their recommendations ignored, says Braga. "Those people aren't even in the classroom," she says.

Board members have promised to present teacher concerns about curriculum to the board or to help fund programs such as the Young Authors competition and then have failed to follow up, Braga says.

Because she has been forced to use materials she knows do not cater to students' needs and because the materials were bought over teacher protest, Braga says she feels torn between what she knows is right and what she is told to do.

"I'm leaving and I don't know what I'm going to do."

Teaching is neat, all those little kids going out and giving you hugs and saying "Merry Christmas," she said, with tears in her eyes.

Though Fay declined to comment on Braga's allegations, he said he has seen the administration work closely with teachers in curriculum matters.

"We (the board) don't really communicate with the teachers, we communicate through the superintendent and make school policy," he said.

For Doris Williams, an eighth and ninth grade English teacher at O'Leary junior high school, the failure of the board and the union to come to an agreement was a disappointment in her 25th and last year. Williams will retire at the end of the year, though she did not choose to do so because of the dispute.

"I realize things are more complicated now, but I think professional people could have managed to get along better than we have."

Teacher morale, she says, is lower than at any time since the teacher strike in 1976.

Williams, who was once a negotiator for the union, says the union has been successful in bringing teachers sick leave and other benefits.

"They (the board) don't know the good things we're doing, they never come to see what we're doing," she says.

"I've enjoyed it, but I'm not going to be sad to leave," she says.

Bickel school kindergarten teacher Tris Woodhead says all teachers are not upset over the board's decision.

"There are lots of us that aren't down," she says.

"A lot of us felt that people on both sides should have been willing to compromise, when the TEFA (teachers union) said it would not compromise it pushed things into a confrontation."

"I love teaching. It's more fun than anything you can imagine," Woodhead, who has taught for 25 years, says she hopes to teach until she is 70 years old.

"Nobody ever promised you'd get paid well," she says. Some teachers have unrealistic expectations about their ability to support their families on teacher's salary.

"I wouldn't want to sit through the school board meetings, I've always thought of them as sort of noble people," she says. "There are a lot of us who don't feel negatively towards the board."

State Senate, seeking to defeat incumbent John Peavey, a Carey Democrat.

Peavey's slim, 58-vote margin of victory over Ellsworth sparked an unsuccessful election challenge from Blaine County Republicans, who questioned the county's voter registration practices.

That challenge and its allegations of voting irregularities have been referred to frequently in recent days by supporters of defeated Idaho Rep. George Hansen. The Hansen supporters are similarly challenging in courts and the Idaho Legislature — the county's registration system, hoping to turn around the narrow margin that caused the seven-term incumbent Hansen to lose to Democrat Richard Stallings.

The Idaho U.S. Attorney's post is one of 94 such positions in the United States. The U.S. Attorney is responsible for all Idaho litigation involving the United States government and supervises a staff of 22, including seven other attorneys.

Officially, appointments to the post are made by the president with the advice of the Senate. However, generally the state's senior U.S. senator from the president's own party forwards the name of the favored candidate.

The position pays about $70,000 a year.

In his press release, McClure stated that he consulted with Republican state and federal officials in Idaho before selecting Ellsworth. He added that "the choice was a difficult one, since there were several talented and well-qualified candidates for the position."

In addition to Ellsworth and Vanhole, the Times-News earlier this month identified former Cassia County Prosecutor Gordon Neilson, now a Boise attorney in private practice, as a possible candidate for the post.

Cooke being pushed for canonization

By RICK HAMPSON
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In the Cardinal Terence Cooke was a modest, quiet man, with an affinity for administrative detail and an indifference to personal publicity. In death, he has become a candidate for sainthood, the subject of a spirited public relations campaign for his canonization.

The effort, waged on his behalf, shows that, although a successful nominee for Roman Catholic sainthood must be credited with miracles, there is nothing miraculous about the long, costly process of canonization.

"Most people are mystics about this," they think (sainthood) just emerges," said David O'Brien, a church historian. "But it has a lot to do with politics and who has the energy and staff to keep things moving along."

In the New York Archdiocese, whose chancellor used to be called "The Powerhouse," Cooke has a formidable champion.

Archbishop John J. O'Connor began touting Cooke for sainthood shortly after he was named the cardinal's successor earlier this year. Then, around the time of Cooke's death last October, the Cardinal Cooke Guild was formed "to promote the cause of his sainthood."

A saint, according to Lawrence Cunningham, author of "The Meaning of Sainthood," is someone who was "a living example of outstanding holiness and heroic Christian virtue. The key word is heroic, because the world is full of good people."

Cooke's supporters say the cardinal died of cancer in 1978, but in the last, painful days before his death from leukemia on Oct. 6, 1983, Cardinal Cooke, kept working, composing letters on the dignity of life that formed the cornerstone of his claim to sainthood.

"Life is no less beautiful when it is accompanied by illness or weakness, hunger or poverty, physical or mental diseases, loneliness or old age," he insisted.

But even before his last agony, Cooke "lived with a diagnosis of terminal cancer for eight years, and still worked 18-hour days, seven days a week," said the Rev. Benedict Groeschel, the official promoter of Cooke's cause.

The guild, which has more than 1,000 members, has distributed prayer cards and application forms in each of the archdiocese's 411 parishes, inviting Catholics to join as an annual member ($5), sustaining member ($25) or patron ($100). Dues pay for semi-annual newsletters and help cover the expense of compiling a record of almost everything Cooke did, wrote or said. The guild even has a logo, fashioned from Cooke's coat of arms.

The archdiocese has issued "This Grace Filled Moment," a book of pictures, biographical details and 25,000 copies of the book, which is sold for $9.95. A half-hour documentary also is planned.

Guild members and other Catholics are urged to pray for Cooke's cause and to report any "favours," they believe will be attributable to the late cardinal's intervention.

"We get two or three letters a day" from those who have prayed to Cooke, reporting favours such as a recovery from illness or a new job, according to Groeschel.

But few are miracles, three of which must normally must be credited to a successful candidate for sainthood. A medical miracle, for example, "must be a spontaneous, unexplained, completely instant recovery from a severe physical pathology," Groeschel said.

"We have a couple of cases we're keeping our eye on," one involving the remission of cancer in a Catholic well-known woman in the Catholic community.

Cooke's application can be sent to Rome in four years for review by a Vatican commission. If Archbishop O'Connor is satisfied with the case's strength, his canonization usually cannot take place until 50 years after the saint's death, Groeschel said the guild hopes for a rapid exception.

Although the effort in some ways resembles the campaigns carried out by college sports departments or film studios on behalf of Heisman Trophy or Academy Award candidates, Groeschel was careful to downplay the public relations angle.

"We have to be careful with our language. A wrong turn of the phrase could sour the milk," he said.

Three Americans have been canonized, and only one, Elizabeth Seton, was born here. Kateri Tekakwitha, a Mohawk Indian who died in 1680, was declared "blessed," the final stage before canonization, in 1980.

A former communist who had an abortion and bore an illegitimate child, Dorothy Day became what Cunningham termed "a luminously holy Catholic, who stands for the transforming possibilities of Christianity in an age not too sympathetic to that."

Yarbrough remains in prison

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

BOISE — A former Aryan Nations member who is the prime suspect in the Denver slaying of a Jewish radio host was ordered held without bond Friday on assault and weapons charges filed after a gun allegedly was fired at FBI agents near Sandpoint.

A federal magistrate said that Gary Lee Yarbrough, 29, might file for release from custody, and that he could be a threat to public safety.

U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams ruled at the end of a two-hour detention hearing at which FBI agents told of a weapons arsenal Yarbrough allegedly possessed. They also described Yarbrough's attempt to flee from a Portland, Ore., motel stakeout that resulted in his arrest on Nov. 24.

A motel companion, reported neo-Nazi Robert Matthews, escaped and is believed to have died in a Wildbey Island, Wash., house ignited during a subsequent standoff with federal authorities.

Yarbrough is scheduled for trial Jan. 16 on charges of assaulting a federal officer and possessing firearms as a convicted felon. His background includes three 1976 burglary convictions in Arizona.

FBI agent Michael Johnston of San Francisco testified Yarbrough fired a gun at him and two other agents on Oct. 18 when they went to Yarbrough's home north of Sandpoint.

Denver police have identified Yarbrough as the prime suspect in the June submachine-gun killing of Denver talk-show host Alan Berg. Yarbrough has not been charged in that case.

He has said a gun police claim was the murder weapon was given him after Berg's death. Police have identified the weapon as a MAC-10 .45-caliber submachine gun that the FBI says was found in a briefcase at Yarbrough's home.

A self-described white separatist who belonged to the paramilitary Church of Jesus Christ Christian-Aryan Nations, Yarbrough also is charged in the April 23 robbery of $500,000 from an armored car in Seattle. His co-defendants are five former members of the Aryan Nations, which is based in Hayden Lake.

Denver police have said the FBI had Yarbrough's home north of Sandpoint under surveillance for six weeks in connection with a $3.8 million armored car robbery near Ukiah, Calif., on July 16. Yarbrough has not been charged in the Ukiah holdup. A federal indictment in the Seattle case describes that heist as "nearly identical" to the California robbery.

Johnston said at Friday's hearing that he and two other agents went to Yarbrough's home on Oct. 18 in search of Yarbrough and his brother, Steve. The brother was wanted on burglary and robbery charges in Arizona and was arrested in Tennessee last month.

Agents were seeking Gary Yarbrough for harboring his brother, "and possibly in connection with other matters," Johnston said Friday. The FBI had been observing Yarbrough in connection with the Ukiah robbery, according to U.S. District Court files.

Johnston testified that Yarbrough fired a gun at least three times at the FBI agents while they were in a U.S. Forest Service pickup truck they had borrowed in an attempt to conceal their identities.

"The weapon was being pointed directly at us," said Johnston, who testified agents returned to the Yarbrough residence the night of Oct. 18 with search and arrest warrants.

Another FBI agent testified that weapons found at Yarbrough's residence included three fully automatic guns. Authorities also claim Yarbrough possessed gun silencers, dynamite and grenades. In calling for Yarbrough's detention without bond, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Howen said some of the weapons Yarbrough allegedly possessed have no legitimate purpose.

"These weapons are purely and simply made for wounding, maiming and killing other human beings," Howen said.

Yarbrough's attorney, James Kaufman, called the government's assault charge questionable and said there was no evidence to show Yarbrough poses a threat to the public.

Kaufman requested that Friday's hearing, attended by a number of reporters, be closed to limit the chance publicity would make it hard for his client to get a fair trial.

Williams denied the request after Howen and reporters in the courtroom objected to closure.

Howen said press coverage of Yarbrough resulted in part from Yarbrough's own decision to meet with reporters at the Ada County Jail.

Howen said Kaufman couldn't justify asking for a closed hearing "when the defendant is holding press conferences and making comments to news media people."

MOSCOW (AP) — Thomas Bell, who watched for eight months while a parade of seven other candidates were interviewed, has been named academic vice president at the University of Idaho.

Bell had declined to apply for the permanent job during the initial search. But he changed his mind when the search was extended, and he became one of three finalists to be interviewed last week and early this week.

Bell said he learned of his appointment Friday morning.

FBI shied away from sheriff for alleged leak

SANDPOINT (AP) — An alleged security leak in the Bonner County Sheriff's Department discouraged the FBI from dealing with deputies when agents went to Gary Lee Yarbrough's home in October, according to sheriff's officials.

Undersheriff Chip Roos said a Bonner County sheriff's officer was, at one time, being accused of leaking information about a narcotics investigation.

"We checked it out," Roos said, "and we found he (the officer) had no knowledge of the situation and was 3,000 miles away at the time."

On Oct. 18, Sandpoint police and FBI agents were involved in what Yarbrough calls an "ambush" at his rented house. The incident led to subsequent events and arrests involving white supremacists throughout the Northwest.

Yarbrough's house is 12 miles outside the city limits.

"The feds got the impression we had a problem, and because of that they didn't want us brought into it," Roos said.

"If they had doubts, it's good that they did what they did," he said.

The department was told the morning after the incident to stay out of it, Roos said.

Then-Sheriff Rocky Eveland called Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who called the FBI in Butte, Mont.

"The feds were very apologetic," Roos said. The problems between the agencies have been resolved, he said.

The Yarbrough incident was handled on a "need to know basis," according to Sandpoint police detective Andy Anderson.

"The city was involved because the original information was requested to assist the bureau in identifying a residence here in Sandpoint," Anderson said.

Anderson said the city had been involved in a narcotics investigation at the same house Yarbrough later rented.

Valley voters approve tax districts

CASCADE (AP) — Valley County voters have approved creation of two taxing districts to support community hospitals in McCall and Cascade.

County Clerk John Crutcher said a district for McCall Memorial Hospital passed 619 to 136 on Tuesday. A district for Valley County Hospital in Cascade passed 406 to 83, he said.

Between them, the two districts will cover the entire county, Crutcher said.

Idaho law allows hospital districts to levy a 2-mill property tax annually, or 2 cents on the dollar.

Approximately $160,000 could be raised in the McCall district and $75,000 in the Valley County district.

McCall Memorial, which has 21 beds, lost $11,500 for the year that ended Sept. 30, despite a $17,800 contribution from Valley County.

The Cascade hospital, with 10 beds, ended the fiscal year at $2,600 in the black, but only because it received $59,400 from the county.

Both hospitals suffered from low occupancy rates, officials said.

Jerry Hart, who administers the two hospitals for Health Management Services Inc. of McCall, said earlier the hospitals would have had to shut down in the spring without an additional source of funds.

Gun charge against storeowner dropped

CALDWELL (AP) — A weapons charge will be dismissed against a Notus storeowner who held a suspected shoplifter at gunpoint, according to Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris.

"As far as I'm concerned the guy has a right to protect his property," Harris said. "A merchant does have a right under Idaho statute to stop and detain a person suspected of shoplifting for a reasonable period of time."

Arthur Blake, 40, owner of Moore's Grocery, was cited last week for carrying a concealed weapon after chasing a suspected shoplifter from his store and at one point holding a shotgun on him.

At the same time, Robert Johnson, 47, of Nampa was charged with petty theft.

While Harris said he felt Moore was within his rights and would not be prosecuted, the prosecutor warned storeowners that state law also requires them to post a copy of the Idaho shoplifting statute if they want to be immune from civil liability in similar incidents.

Tanning booths deal brings bust

SPOKANE (AP) — A Spokane man who sold tanning booths has been charged with stealing more than $6,000 from a Grangeville, Idaho, athletic club.

William Calvin Stout Jr., 51, faces a felony charge of first-degree theft, according to Spokane District Court records.

Authorities said the Camas Athletic Club and Health Center in Grangeville ordered two tanning booths from Golden Image Inc. earlier this year. Stout was listed as sole owner of Golden Image.

Camas Athletic wrote a check to Golden Image for $4,190 on May 9 and another for $2,100 on July 4. Vern Vance, president of Camas Athletic, told detectives he never received the merchandise.

Once again, IBM most admired firm

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Computer giant International Business Machines Corp. again is the most admired of 250 large U.S. companies ranked in Fortune magazine's annual survey of corporate reputations.

The business magazine said Wednesday that the least admired was Continental Illinois Corp., which bumped a fellow Chicago-based company, International Harvester Inc., out of the bottom spot.

A company's reputation — "easily cracked but hard to mend" — affects its ability to raise capital and attract employees, the magazine noted.

Fortune's annual survey, its third, evaluated the reputations of 250 companies in 25 of the country's largest industries.

executives, directors and financial analysts and asked them to rate the 10 largest companies. In their industry. About 52 percent responded, it said.

Using a scale of one to 10, with 10 being excellent, the respondents rated the companies on eight attributes: quality of management; quality of products or services; innovativeness; long-term investment value; financial soundness; ability to attract, develop and keep talented people; community and environmental responsibility; and use of corporate assets.

Management quality was seen by the respondents as the most important attribute, Fortune said.

IBM scored slightly lower this year than last — an average 8.44 vs. 8.53. It did particularly well in management quality, investment value, financial soundness and use of assets, but not as well in innovativeness.

Except for Armonk, N.Y.-based IBM, which has topped the list all three years, the 10 most admired companies from last year's survey swapped places or dropped from this year's ranking. Gone from the top 10 were Johnson & Johnson and Time Inc., which publishes Fortune.

Soft-drink giant Coca-Cola Co. of Atlanta jumped to second place from ninth. It has had great success with its new Diet Coke.

Dow Jones & Co., the New York-based media company, was third. Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. of Minneapolis became one of the 10 most-admired companies for the first time with a No. 4 ranking. Hewlett-Packard Co., the Palo Alto, Calif.-based computer company, slipped to fifth place from third. The next five were Anheuser-Busch Cos., Boeing Co., General Electric Co., Roalson, Kodak Co. and returned to the list, and Merck & Co., which fell from fourth to 10th.

At the other end, for the first time, industrial companies did not dominate the least admired.

The least admired were Continental Illinois, which was to be bailed out by the federal government; Financial Corp. of America, the Los Angeles holding company of the nation's largest savings and loan, which had huge runs on its deposits; and, at March 10, the largest steel building materials producer that is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings.

Filling out the 10 least admired were Pan American World Airways Inc., Eastern Air Lines Inc., American National Harvester, American Motors Corp., Trans World Airlines, Asarco Inc. and Pabst Brewing Co., which has agreed to be acquired by G. Heileman Brewing Co. of La Crosse,

IBM curtails shipments of computer

the Los Angeles Times

International Business Machines Corp. has curtailed shipments of its top-of-the-line personal computer, apparently because of continued technical problems with the machine.

IBM said it has warned dealers that they won't get as many "enhanced" versions of the PC AT as they had ordered for the January through March quarter. The company blamed strong demand and component short-

IBM officials refused to acknowledge it, but dealers said the shortages stem from the same technical problem that began cropping up last month in about 10 percent of the machines that were being shipped. The Los Angeles Times reported earlier that some dealers experienced problems with the hard-disk drive of the enhanced XT model.

The callback will worsen what was already a short supply of the PC AT line, which went on sale in September. Dealers are to be notified this week what portion of their first-quarter orders they will receive. Direct corporate customers of IBM are being told that new AT orders could take up to nine months to fill. The AT line is the most sophisticated and expensive of IBM's personal computers and has been sought mostly by businesses.

The Los Angeles Times

DETROIT—Faced with worsening sales of its Renault-designed Alliance and Encore subcompacts, American Motors Corp. said it is cutting prices of the cars by an average of 1.6 percent, or $107.

The company also said it would offer even larger price cuts on its Renault Alliance models in California and other Western states where import competition was the fiercest. AMC said it was immediately reducing the price of its base Alliance model by $166, or about 2.7 percent, to $5,995 from $6,161. In order to compete with Japanese imports, Alliance prices on the West Coast will be cut by $394, or 6.4 percent, to $5,767 from $6,161.

meanwhile, AMC said it was reducing the base price on its Encore model by $64, or 1.1 percent, to $5,895 from $5,959. (The company will not offer larger discounts on the Encore on the West Coast, however.)

AMC said it would offer discounts of $111 on its more expensive, option-laden Alliance models in most of the nation, with discounts of $339 available in California and elsewhere on the West Coast. Prices on the more expensive versions of the Encore will be cut by $40 nationwide.

Governor calls for plant inspection

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. Joe Frank Harris asked Friday for a federal safety inspection of Union Carbide's south Georgia insecticide plant and a temporary ban on its use of methyl isocyanate, the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people in India.

Also Friday, Union Carbide Corp. announced and then canceled or delayed layoffs at the company's pesticide plant in Woodbine where use of the chemical was halted while authorities investigate the Dec. 3 leak at Union Carbide's plant in Bhopal, India.

In a telegram to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Harris asked for a halt on further use of methyl isocyanate at the Woodbine plant until inspections have been completed.

He also asked the national Centers for Disease Control to help state health officials find the safest way to handle the chemical.

Harris asked that OSHA inspectors report to him "confirming that such processing can be conducted without endangering the health of the employees and the community and without releasing any of the methyl isocyanate into the environment," according to an announcement released by Harris' office in Atlanta.

Harris also told officials at the Woodbine plant of his request to OSHA and asked that they tell him "any future plans to transport methyl isocyanate to the Woodbine plant be made known" so the state can provide an escort when any shipments move over Georgia highways.

THE ACES[®] BOBBY WOLFF

"The closest to perfection a person ever comes is when he fills out a job application form."

Stanley J. Handall.

South cannot afford to slip today in his play of the diamonds. Anything short of perfect play will give the defenders the plus score.

East wins his diamond ace and returns the 10. What card should South play?

If South covers reflexively, the game is lost. West refuses to win his king, giving South good reason to regret his impulsiveness. South takes the club finesse because he must, and his fears come true. Back comes a diamond through South's Q-8 and West collects three more diamond winners for one down.

South should play his diamond eight under East's diamond 10-at trick two—a variation of the standard hold-up play. East continues with a third diamond and now it is futile for West to duck. West takes his diamond king, but that's not enough. The defenders get three diamonds and the king of clubs, while South wins nine tricks and a vulnerable game.

Fourth quarter becomes a Holiday for BYU

Despite a knee injury, Robbie Bosco fired two fourth-quarter TD passes to lead the Cougars

Hobbling QB Bosco's heroics send Cougars past Wolverines

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Robbie Bosco shrugged off a first-period knee and ankle injury and passed No. 1 Brigham Young to a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns that gave the Cougars a 24-17 victory over Michigan in the Holiday Bowl Friday night and may have brought them their first national championship.

Bosco, the nation's total offense leader, threw scoring passes of seven yards to Glen Kozlowski, with 10:51 remaining to tie the score and then hit Kelly Smith with a 13-yarder with just 1:23 left for the victory.

The first drive covered 80 yards in eight plays, with Bosco completing six passes in as many attempts for 76 yards. The winning drive took 10 plays and covered 83 yards with Bosco connecting on six of seven passes for 61 yards.

The 6-foot-3½, junior finished with 30 completions in 42 attempts for 343 yards and his late heroics offset five personal turnovers — three interceptions and two fumbles.

The victory made the Cinderella Cougars, unranked at the start of the season, only the second major college team in the last 80 years to post a 13-0 record. It also was BYU's first perfect campaign in 60 seasons of football and stretched the nation's longest winning streak to 24 games.

Michigan finished 6-6, the first time since 1967 that a Wolverine team had dropped that many games. The setback also gave Michigan's Bo Schembechler, one of the nation's winningest coaches, an embarrassing 2-10 record in bowl games.

Brigham Young committed six turnovers altogether and had a field goal blocked. Michigan took advantage of three of the mistakes, including several costly penalties, to score all its points.

The underdog Wolverines took a 14-0 lead on a 10-yard pass from Chris Zurburg to Bob Perryman with 19 seconds left in the third quarter. They made it 17-10 on a 32-yard field goal by Bob Bergeron just 46 seconds into the final quarter.

But with its back against the wall and a shot at a possible national championship slipping away, Brigham Young turned to its vaunted passing game to pull out the victory.

Starting from their 20 after Bergeron's field goal, the Cougars, who were held scoreless in the first and third periods — the first time all season they failed to score in two quarters of the same game — quickly got their offense back in gear. Bosco passed to Smith for nine yards — one of his 10 receptions for 88 yards — and Laker Heimull ran for 12 more.

Bosco hit David Mills for 12 yards — one of his 11 catches for 103 yards — and then was sacked for a three-yard loss. But he winged a 20-yard pass to Adam Haysbert, hit Mark Bellini for 19 and Mills for nine.

That put the ball at the Michigan 7 and Kozlowski grabbed Bosco's next pass in the rear of the end zone although he was sandwiched by defensive backs Erik Campbell and Ivan Hicks.

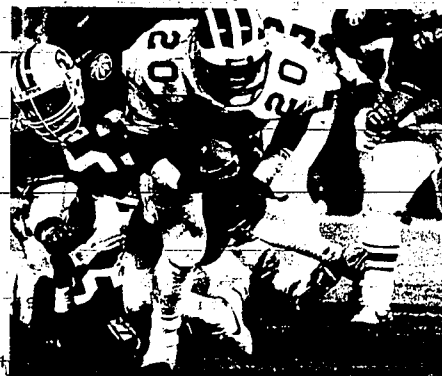

Bosco threw his third interception with 8:23 remaining, a pass that caromed off Kozlowski's hands and was returned 12 yards to the BYU 45 by linebacker Jim Scarcelli. The Wolverines moved to the 34, but linebacker Kurt Gouveia sacked Zurburg for a 16-yard loss that pushed them out of field goal range.

Monte Hobbs punting to the BYU 17 with 4:36 to go, but Bosco and the Cougars were not to be denied.

Three running plays gained 18 yards and Bosco whipped a 20-yard pass to Bellini. A face mask penalty against Michigan's Garland Rivers put the ball at the 30 and six plays later the Cougars had the winning touchdown.

Heimull lost two yards and Bosco decided to stick to his air game. He passed six yards to Heimull and five to Smith for a first down at the 19. Haysbert caught a pass for six yards and Smith dropped Bosco's next attempt.

But the junior halfback made up for that by catching the next one in the end zone for the game-winning touchdown. Linebacker Mary Allen intercepted a Michigan pass with 44 seconds left and BYU ran out the clock.

Freshman cage star charged with theft

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Freshman center Chris Washburn was charged with second-degree burglary, Friday, and head Coach Jim Valvano said Washburn had been "dismissed" from the North Carolina State basketball team.

A Wake County magistrate who refused to give his name said Washburn was held under $1,000 bond after a preliminary hearing Friday. The magistrate said the charge stemmed from a Wednesday night break-in at the university's athletic dormitory and involved stereo equipment.

In a prepared statement, Valvano said Washburn was dismissed from N.C. State's 14th-ranked basketball squad because of "personal behavior."

"We are all saddened that this step is necessary because Chris is a young man who had been making progress," said Valvano.

"Hopefully, with proper help and counseling, Chris will be able to realize his potential as a human being."

Valvano did not elaborate on the reasons for Washburn's dismissal and didn't say whether there was any chance that he would be reinstated.

The 6-foot-11 Washburn, a Hickory, N.C., native, was one of the nation's most highly recruited high school players. He was Parade Magazine national co-player of the year as a senior when he averaged 30 points, 17 rebounds and nine blocked shots per game at Laurinburg Institute.

He started in five of N.C. State's six games thus far, averaging 10.2 points and 5.6 rebounds per game.

Washburn, charged in August with assault-on-a-female, pleaded guilty Sept. 20 and was given a suspended 30-day sentence plus a fine of $25 and court costs.

Get set to pick, clean own game birds

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At the most, it may prove to be a major conservation step for Magic Valley's wintering waterfowl populations.

At the least it will remind Magic Valley's hunters that the joy of duck hunting and duck dinners are separated by the less enjoyable part of picking and cleaning.

Gone — at least for the time being — is a processing plant in Twin Falls. Poultry Supply of Twin Falls, after being issued a warning by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, began refusing to accept game birds for processing Friday morning.

Harold Becker, manager of the plant, said "they want me to check licenses and license numbers and I don't have the time to do that. I get the name, address and amount of game they bring in and that should be enough. Getting the name and numbers off the license would take another man up here (at the desk) to do that alone."

Although some protest calls from clean-handed hunters indicated the department had closed the processing plant down, Howard Carroll, enforcement chief for Region 4, said "we haven't closed anyone down."

Carroll said Poultry Supply was given a warning ticket which indicated that if compliance with the Idaho code on the matter of transporting and processing wildlife wasn't met, a citation would be issued.

In this case the business was not complying with the record-keeping the code requires. We had talked to him before and he didn't heed. He elected himself to not continue in (wild game processing) business."

The Idaho code requires that all wildlife in transit or processing be accompanied by a statement from the person harvesting that bird or animal. And that is where most hunters run a-foul of the law.

Carroll said the responsibility primarily lies with the hunters.

"Say you and I went out hunting," he explained, "and I shot both wild turkeys. I said I would take the birds down to the processor. That would mean I would have 14 birds. To keep myself in compliance with the law, I would need a statement that included your name, address, license number and the number, species and sex of birds that you have given me for transport. I would then be responsible for the other seven since they would be in my possession. It is possible for one man to have a pickup load of deer and be legal providing he had this type of statement claiming ownership for each deer in his possession."

Poultry Supply Manager Harold Becker said the complications of compliance are greater than that.

"In most cases the women bring the birds in. The husband has gone to work and she brings in the birds for processing," he said. "She doesn't have licenses and those other things. She leaves her name and address and the number of birds brought in."

Becker said he maintained an entry book at his business in which those bringing in game are asked to include the required information.

"Once in a while someone puts down his license number but most of the time it's just the name and number of birds. We can't afford to have someone sitting up here checking everything out."

Carroll said that while Poultry Supply and the department had had discussions concerning the law earlier this year and last, a situation in eastern Idaho brought the matter to Friday's head.

The Pocatello area enforcement branch had reason to believe a party of Magic Valley hunters had exceeded the goose limit considerably during a hunt on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation. The Magic Valley region was asked to check on some names the fifth region officers had acquired. The local investigation included a stop at Poultry Supply where full compliance wasn't available and this helped lead to the warning ticket.

A 'simple' confrontation, says Knox

Raiders-Seahawks: No holds barred

SEATTLE (AP) — There's nothing complicated about today's AFC wild-card playoff game between the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders and Seattle. In fact, Seahawks head Coach Chuck Knox said "We're going to play hard and they're going to play hard," says Knox. "Whoever makes the most plays in the game is going to win. It's that simple."

The Seahawks and the Raiders, second- and third-place finishers, respectively, in the AFC West, meet in the Kingdom at 2 p.m. MST. The winner will go on to face AFC East champion Miami in Miami Saturday, Dec. 29.

"The thing we have to do is have a fine focus on what we're doing or it's going to come to a quick end," said Knox, "because we're in a sudden-death, single-elimination tournament."

Seattle, which had a 12-4 regular-season National Football League record, will go into the game with a two-game losing streak while the 11-5 Raiders will take a one-game losing beaten soundly by Denver 31-14. The Broncos earned the AFC West title.

The following day in Los Angeles, the Raiders had a chance to get the home-field advantage against the Seahawks but were knocked off by Pittsburgh 13-7.

Despite the loss, which ended a four-game Los Angeles winning streak, Knox feels last season's NFL champions are just as motivated as they were a year ago at this time.

"Those people have been there," he said of the Raiders, "and, besides, some of their families probably have already spent that extra money from last season. So I don't think just because they were there last year that they're any less hungry this year."

Coach Tom Flores of the Raiders will start 14-year veteran Jim Plunkett at quarterback. He called Plunkett off the bench against Pittsburgh to replace fifth-year pro Marc Wilson.

It was the most Plunkett had played since being injured in the sixth game of the season.

He said he doesn't intend to pull Plunkett and replace him with Wilson — even if the Raiders' offense sputters.

"I don't want to jump back and forth," Flores said. "Once you go with a quarterback, you want to feel he can get the job done."

The Raiders will be trying to become the first team since Pittsburgh did it in 1978 and 1979 to win successive NFL championships.

In 1980, the Oakland Raiders, coached by Flores, became the only wild-card club in NFL history to win a Super Bowl.

"We've got to play a solid football game," Flores said. "We've got to eliminate the big play. We've got to play good, solid defense and, we have to be more consistent offensively and score some points."

Third-year running back Marcus Allen, who was voted as the most valuable player after rushing for 191 yards and two touchdowns in the Super Bowl 13-9 win over Washington last January, has been a special thorn in the side to the Seahawks.

'Bowling' continues with three grid duels

By The Associated Press

Michigan State Coach George Perles apparently would like to keep things simple as his Spartans take on bowl newcomer Army in the Cherry Bowl today.

Unfortunately, the Cadets may not be very accommodating.

"Army's wishbone offense is a very, very complicated one," Perles says. "It looks like it's the same thing over and over from the stands, but it isn't. They have different reads, different people that they're keying on, and they run the wishbone as well as anyone in the country now."

Kickoff for the Cherry Bowl, which will be televised in many parts of the country by the Midco network, was scheduled for 11 a.m. MST in the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

Two other bowl games were set for today: Georgia, 7-4, vs. No. 15 Florida State in the Florida Citrus Bowl at Orlando (10:30 a.m. EST-NDT, Channel 7), and Tennessee, 7-3-1, vs. No. 12 Maryland in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas (1 p.m. EST-CBS, Channel 2).

"We're not taking them lightly," Michigan State linebacker Jim Morrissey says of Army. "We've seen the films. They're a fine football team. They go up and down the field. They never make mistakes. They don't turn the ball over."

Army, 7-3-1 this season, has never been in a bowl game, while Michigan State has not been to postseason play since the 1966 Rose Bowl.

"Michigan State," a four-point favorite, limited opponents to just 3,614 yards this season, but they did not face a wishbone attack.

Florida State also is a four-point favorite, and Maryland is favored by a touchdown over Tennessee.

MVP distinction goes to Marino

MIAMI (AP) — Dan Marino, who was named the National Football League's Most Valuable Player Friday by The Associated Press, doesn't like to boast, but his Miami-Dolphin teammates and coaches don't mind doing it for him.

"The man is just phenomenal," said wide receiver Mark Clayton, who has to give a good deal of the credit for his NFL single-season record of 13 touchdown receptions to Marino. "What can you say that hasn't been said about him? Everyone in American knows about him."

Marino, who gained a good deal of fame while throwing for more than 8,500 yards in college at Pittsburgh, earned his spot at the head of the NFL class with record-smashing numbers in 1984.

He threw 48 touchdown passes, 12 more than any NFL passer had ever amassed in a season. He also became the first NFL quarterback to throw for more than 5,000 yards, finishing with 5,984 while leading the Dolphins to a 14-2 record and the AFC Eastern Division title.

That enabled him to win the MVP award over Eric Dickerson, who picked the wrong year to break the single-season rushing record. Dickerson picked up 2,105 yards to erase O.J. Simpson's mark by 102 yards, but he didn't make the impression with the 10-6 Rams that Marino made with the Dolphins.

Marino got 52 votes in the balloting, opening three sports writers or broadcasters covering each of the 28 NFL cities. Dickerson was next with 16, while the Chicago Bears' Walter Payton, who surpassed Jim Brown's all-time rushing record and finished the year with 13,247 yards, was third.

"It's exciting," Marino said of the award. "It's something special because there are so many great players in the league. I think I'm fortunate because I've been able to play with great players on my team to help me accomplish a lot of good things. That's why an award like that will make me feel good, because it just shows those guys were able to help me out."

Dolphins Coach Don Shula has run out of compliments for his second-year quarterback.

"What can you say?" Shula asked. "It's hard to believe Dan is only in his second year considering all the things he accomplished."

After a lackluster final season at Pitt, Marino was passed over by 26 teams in the 1983 NFL draft. It didn't take long for him to show the other teams they were wrong.

King enters plea of innocent

NEW YORK (AP) — Boxing promoter Don King, famous for his booming voice and wild hairstyle, promised "business as usual" as he pleaded innocent Friday to charges of evading $211,000 in federal income taxes.

King, 53, and an associate, Constance Harper, 51, were named last week in a 23-count federal indictment charging they had skimmed more than $1 million in cash receipts from King's company, Don King Productions Inc., and that most of that money found its way to King's pocket.

They surrendered voluntarily at a seven-minute appearance before U.S. District Judge Whitman Knapp, who accepted their innocent pleas. He allowed both to remain free, King after posting a $250,000 personal recognizance bond secured by $25,000 in cash, and Harper after posting a $200,000 personal recognizance bond co-signed by her sister.

King was ordered to surrender his passport but was given permission to continue traveling around the United States, provided his lawyer gives prosecutors a weekly report on his whereabouts.

King was a one-time numbers runner from Cleveland who burst onto the boxing scene in the early-1970s after serving more than four years in prison for manslaughter. His reputation as a promoter was assured in 1974 when he arranged "The Rumble in the Jungle."

Refs penalized for mistakes

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A veteran Big Eight and Missouri Valley Conference basketball official has been suspended for two games because of "gross errors" he made in an Iowa State-Drake game two weeks ago, and similar action is being considered against two other men who officiated the game.

"The officiating was inconsistent all the way through the game," Johnny Overby, supervisor of officials in both the Big Eight and Missouri Valley conferences, told the Des Moines Register.

Overby said he suspended Wayne Unruh of Hutchinson, Kan., for two games. Similar action will be taken against the other two officials who worked the game, Charles Greene of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Kent Henry of Springfield, Ill., Overby said.

Unruh has worked games in both the Big Eight and the Missouri Valley for years, while Greene officiates only in the Big Eight and Henry works the Valley.

The three-man crew whistled 49 personal fouls in Iowa State's 74-73 victory over Drake Dec. 8 in Ames. There were two controversial calls in the closing seconds, one of which appeared to be incorrect on videotape replays and the other involving an interpretation of the charging rule.

Rutigliano nixes Bills' offer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former Cleveland Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano says a financial offer for coaching the Buffalo Bills was not satisfactory.

"We just couldn't work out things financially," Rutigliano said.

Bills owner Ralph Wilson last week offered Rutigliano the job with the National Football League team, the Akron Beacon Journal reported Friday.

Rutigliano has 4 1/2 years remaining on his Browns contract at a reported salary of $200,000 a year.

Patriots' Berry purges staff

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England Patriots head Coach Raymond Berry, who took over midseason, dismissed all but one of his coaches Friday.

The only exception, team spokesman Jim Greenidge reported, was defensive coordinator Rod Rust, who had been rehired by Berry immediately when he took over the National Football League team.

Those fired were defensive line coach Tommy Brasher, strength and conditioning coach LeBaron Caruthers, offensive coordinator and quarterback coach Lew Erber, offensive line coach Bill Nair, tight end and special team coach Dante Searnscechla, linebacker coach Steve Sidwell and defensive secondary coach Steve Walters.

Berry said in a statement: "As soon as the season ended, I turned my attention to decisions involving my coaching staff. My decision is that I need to hire my own staff, have my own system of offense and defense."

Eligibility case dropped

SHEVEPPEPORT, La. (AP) — A lawyer for the National Collegiate Athletic Association said Friday that a state court has dismissed a case involving the eligibility of Virginia Tech's Bruce Smith to play in a football bowl game that already has been played.

"Once Bruce Smith had played in the bowl game, the issue was moot, and everyone anticipated that they would dismiss the suit on the grounds of mootness," NCAA lawyer Arthur R. Carmody said. He said the dismissal "was a formally voided suit, as 'appealing to oppose'."

Grid magazine gives laurels

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Reeves, whose Denver Broncos went from 9-7 in 1983 to 13-3 and the championship of the American Football Conference West in 1984, was named Friday the National Football League Coach of the Year by Pro Football Weekly.

The publication also selected Miami quarterback Dan Marino as Offensive Most Valuable Player, Seattle safety Kenny Easley as Defensive MVP, Pittsburgh receiver-punt returner Louis Lippas as Offensive Rookie of the Year, Green Bay safety Tom Flynn the Defensive Rookie, Seattle place-kicker Norm Johnson the recipient of the Golden-Toe Award and Pittsburgh wide receiver John Stallworth the Comeback Player of the Year.

Kingman signs pact with A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Dave Kingman, who slammed 35 home runs for the Oakland A's last year, has signed a one-year to return to Oakland in 1985, a team spokesman reported Friday.

"It'll be an improvement on what he had," said Mickey Morabito, but the spokesman declined to reveal the terms of the new contract.

In 1984, his first year in Oakland, the 36-year-old Kingman collected 118 RBIs, tying Reggie Jackson's team record. Kingman has 377 career homers.

Baseball exec sees expansion

DENVER (AP) — A veteran baseball executive says he is convinced there will be expansion of the major leagues by 1986 — with approval of a Denver franchise possible at summer meetings next August.

E.J. "Buz" Bavasi, until recently a member of the owners' Long Range Planning Committee which studied the feasibility of expansion, said, "I'm certain that baseball has every intention of expanding by 1986. Every meeting I attended, 1986 was the year."

Hernandez near Tigers' pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Hernandez and Detroit General Manager Bill Lajoie may have moved a step closer to a contract agreement that will keep the 1984 American League Most Valuable Player and Cy Young award winner with the Tigers, agent Brian David said Friday.

After a communications "outlet" earlier in the day prevented a noon conference call, Hernandez, David, and Lajoie got together Friday afternoon via telephone to discuss the Tigers' latest proposal.

"There's nothing really to report in terms of concrete progress," David said from his Chicago office. "But my gut reaction was that it was a good series of conversations. Bill and Willie had a chance to speak their minds, but there's still not a final agreement by any means."

David said he would talk with Hernandez over the weekend "and Lajoie no later than Monday, and maybe there'll be something then. I don't know."

David said he felt the Tigers' offer was "fair, and I think it's in good faith." But he added there were several "minor" points "that Willie and I have raised that also make a lot of sense . . . and I don't think Detroit should hold so firm to refuse the deal over what we would consider a minor issue."

He would not elaborate on the differences between the two parties.

Earlier in the day, Lajoie said an apparent misunderstanding prevented their first conference call.

He said he and David got on the phone, but when they tried to call Hernandez at home in Puerto Rico, "there was no answer."

Although David said the two sides appeared to be getting closer, Lajoie said he would reserve judgment until after talking with Hernandez.

"The whole thing was supposed to have been set up today, with the idea of talking at noon, and the player was not present . . . I don't feel an agent can say yes or no in this case for a ballplayer. The player has to say that."

After the conference call, Lajoie left Tiger Stadium and was unavailable for comment, although the Tigers' official response was that there had been no progress to report.

Woman takes over Reds' ballclub

CINCINNATI (AP) — Marge Schott, a Cincinnati auto dealer who had been a minority partner in ownership of the Cincinnati Reds, has purchased a majority share of the National League club, the team announced Friday.

Schott, who had been one of 11 minority partners, has bought controlling interest from brothers James R. Williams and William J. Williams, who have been co-chairmen and co-owners of the Reds.

The Reds, who play their home games at Riverfront Stadium, will remain in Cincinnati, team officials told a news conference at the stadium Friday.

The amount of the purchase wasn't announced. Team officials said at the end of the 1984 season that the ballclub lost about $1 million.

Schott, one of the more publicly visible owners, showed up at the news conference with her St. Bernard dog.

Schott, who was wearing a Reds' baseball cap, Schott then handed out little Reds helmets as decorative ornaments.

Schott said she bought controlling interest in the team because she was concerned that the Williams brothers might sell the ballclub to an out-of-city group if no one stepped forward locally to buy the Reds, baseball's oldest professional team. The Reds trace their history back to an 1869 practice game.
